Working In The MMO Niche

If you are one of the thousands of people who search each and every day about making money online you will quickly notice that there is no shortage of websites that promote MMO (Make Money Online) products, programs, and services. This is good for the traffic searching, but if you are thinking about joining our ranks then be prepared to be in one of the most overpopulated niches on the web. There is a lot of money in trying to help others make money, but you will need to understand before starting a website in the make money online world you will need to do your research and find a way to separate your website from the millions of other like it. Also it is a good idea not to go after the big keywords such as “make money online” until you have had success with some others. Try going after less populated key terms such as “paid to read email” or something similar. These are much easier to rank well for and still bring traffic which means they are still valuable.

Once you have your website constructed try and find a name that will separate you from everyone else. Do not pick generic keywords for your website this is one of the easiest ways to get passed over. You should focus on being different and building a brand that is memorable. You should also work on providing an angle for your content that is different. Rather than posting the same crap every other webmaster and blogger post try coming at the online business world with a different view. Personally I am still carving out my little niche and building a brand. I made the mistake of creating my first website and calling it “How To Make Money Online Free” which is extremely keyword oriented and even though my website does teach people how to make money online free it is a terrible title.

One of the biggest successes I have seen online is those who start a make money blog and really keep at it. These people seem to be doing quite well. Some of the blogs that have really done quite well teaching others how to make money include ProBlogger, Shoemoney, and Johnchow. They have actually become some of the most well known people online because of their success. They all found a good voice and if you notice none of their blogs have a title which is generic. When someone says Pro Blogger people know who and what blog they are talking about. The same goes with Shoe Money and John Chow these guys are internet stars because they found ways of separating themselves from the pack. If you want the same level of success then be prepared to spend years working hard every single day. Success online is not something given, but earned and the MMO niche is one of the most difficult categories to become successful with.
