When considering Infinity Downline, a whole lot of people feel they don't have the time to run a home based internet ran business. They believe with the job and family activities and the horde of other activities they are caught up in that they don't have any extra time to successfully run a home based business.

Infinity Downline, like quite a lot of enterprises can be worked online with only a few hours of spare time a week, and sometimes less, depending on the method one uses to advertise said business. The first thing you need to do to find the time to work at home on your business is to analyse your time and precisely how you spend it.

So when you have some quiet time to study, take your pencil and paper and write down every aspect of how you spend your time. Jot down all the activities you engage in and note a start and stop time or an estimation of the sum total of time each activity makes use of.

On your work day activities, document such things as showering, breakfast, getting the kids ready for school, driving to your place of employment, then continue with your week end activities. Be as thorough as you possibly can be.

After you do this exercise it will provide you a good visual in your mind about how you spend your time. If you have the need to put it in a graph form to do this, by all means please do so. You should start to find some time openings here and there where you can fit in a couple of hours to work on your business.

Now when I say slot, what I really am saying is "to commit". Slotting at least 2 hours to your business should be the first objective. Now go back and look at your activities again and see if there isn't some other ways you can allocate a couple of more hours to your business.

You want to designate this time into your timetable and then make a strong commitment to working this time no matter what. It is important that during your committed work times you be truly efficient.

People throw away a lot of time when when working their online business at times like spending all their time checking emails, or checking out all the new biz opps. Being efficient means you identify a task, or several tasks that will help you get your business going and you get going on those tasks and nothing else until you have them complete.

You want to map your ideas, engage your plans with hard and fast action steps towards success of all your marketing goals. Attempt to factor in the time you have to have to complete your documented action steps. This motivated successful action on your part help you in your effort of creating manageable goals and working towards them until they are achieved.

Noting your ideas down on paper and making action plans out of them with set times to get them done will get you a head faster than you might imagine. For example, having 30 messages on an autoresponder follow up campaign would be a great action plan to get accomplished as soon as possible.

If you are in Infinity Downline like myself, be as efficient as you can be, or hold onto this practice to whatever your business program may be. Efficiency by and large means that you cut out wasting your time on other activities that are not your written action steps. A lot of internet marketers these days squander away many hours each day sifting through their emails looking and studying up on the latest craze.

Becoming efficient comes from having a solid plan of business with opening goals, mid range goals, that as you go you progress to even further growth. You initiate, craft and set in motion actionable steps that shoot you towards the completion of these goals and this is how you can become truly efficient, you only work on your written action steps in your designated work time.

In conclusion, I would say in all your started actions, do not label your encountered obstacles as shut doors preventing you from winning but as events that are just part of the complete achievement of your carefully mapped out dreams and goals.

In truth the known universe is governed by the force of attraction, what you do, say think or feel, is exactly what you are attracting to you.
